DRY AGENT TELLS STARTLING TALE

Connects Certain Illinois Politicians With Bootleg Ring.

HIS HOME BLOWN UP BY BOMB

Injunctions Against Prohibition Violators Permitted to Lie Dormant, Witness Says—Offered Bribe of $5 a Barrel on Beer From Chicago Breweries—Manington to Be Questioned by Senate Committee.

Washington, April 8.—Brice Armstrong, a general prohibition agent, told the senate Daugherty committee a story of his three years' fight against a bootleg ring in Chicago.

Witness related how he had been threatened, his home blown up by a bomb and of alleged offers of a bribe of $5 a barrel on beer from seven Chicago breweries. He connected many men high in Illinois politics with the alleged ring. Armstrong brought the name of Attorney General Brundage of Illinois and Homer Galpin, chairman of the Cook County Republican committee, into his testimony.

Armstrong charged that C. W. Middlekauf, a special assistant United States attorney general at Chicago, in charge of injunction cases against prohibition violators, had permitted many injunctions to "lay dormant." He also charged Middlekauf with complicity in a plot to permit the Pure Products company, accused of prohibition violations, to sell its property while an injunction against it was temporarily lifted.

Armstrong named the Illinois Beverage company among others that had been enjoined and the injunction never pressed. This company, he said, was owned by "Terry" Druggan and Frank Lake. "It is the same 'gan crew' that owns the Standard brewery and others," said Armstrong.

"Who were the attorneys for this 'gan crew'?" asked Senator Wheeler. "Lowell B. Mason, state senator from Oak Park district, was the man who came to Washington to get permits for the breweries after they had violated the law," said the witness.

"Who was the man this bootleg ring went to find out what to do?" "Homer Galpin, chairman of the county committee,"

Says He Was Threatened. Armstrong said officials of Brundage's office came to him and endeavored to have him dismiss a case against a bootlegger he had "caught red-handed selling poison stuff." Armstrong said "Terry" Druggan personally had threatened him, telling him he would "settle with him if he didn't lay off."

He said the offer of $5 on a barrel of beer had been made "if he would just stay out of the vicinity." The offer was made, he said, through another prohibition agent, who would not disclose who was behind the offer unless Armstrong agreed to accept it.

Disclosures are expected when Howard Manington of Columbus takes the stand to tell about meetings at the "little green house on K street." Manington is scheduled to arrive in New York from France. A deputy sergeant-at-arms of the senate will be waiting on the dock to serve him with a "forthwith" subpoena. The committee desires most to quiz Manington about testimony that he shared in a "four-cut" on each case of liquor withdrawn from bond under permits secured illegally.

Senator Harrell of Oklahoma told the committee that he took a hand in the Miller Brothers Oklahoma Indian land case to prevent a "scandal." When Harry Daugherty, the attorney general, served notice in August, 1921, that he intended to remove H. M. Peck as United States district attorney in Oklahoma before the case came to trial Harrell said that he went to Daugherty and told him "a scandal would surely result." The case revolved around alleged procurement by the Miller Brothers of 10,000 acres of Indian land valued at $500,000 through alleged fraudulent means. Former Secretary of Interior Fall called a halt on prosecution of the Miller brothers in Oklahoma Indian land fraud cases in which they were involved, according to a letter introduced in the record of the committee. Edwin S. Booth, solicitor of the interior department, gave the committee a letter from Fall to Attorney General Daugherty dated April 10, 1921, in which Fall asked postponement of action against the Miller brothers until a later term of the Oklahoma court.

STATE PRIMARIES TODAY

Sharp Contests in Illinois and Apathy Noted in Nebraska.

Chicago, April 8.—A record breaking vote is expected at the Illinois primaries today. The big fight is between Governor Len Small and Thurston G. Essington, state senator, for the Republican nomination for governor. General opinion is that President Coolidge will win over Senator Hiram Johnson of California. George Brennan, Democratic boss, wants the Democratic delegates to go uninstructed. McAdoo is seeking indorsement.

Lincoln, Neb., April 8.—A light vote is indicated in the Nebraska presidential primary today. Senator Hiram Johnson, running for indorsement by the Republicans against President Coolidge, won out in the primary four years ago. The Californian's supporters say he will repeat. Coolidge supporters profess to see a smashing Coolidge victory. No nominating petitions were filed on the Democratic side.

SOLDIER BONUS BILL WILL BE PRESSED

Senate May Dispose of It Before the Tax Measure.

Washington, April 8.—Senate leaders expressed the opinion that the soldier bonus bill will be disposed of by the senate before the tax reduction measure.

Debate on the bonus bill is not likely to be extended, leaders say. The principal struggle will be waged by the Democrats to insert a cash provision in the bonus bill, which, except in amounts of less than $50, was eliminated by the house. It now provides only certification of paid-up insurance, which after three years gets a cash value. Democratic leaders announced they want an amendment providing for cash bonus payments in addition to the insurance features. Regular Republican leaders will oppose a cash bonus. Smoot estimated the bonus bill in its present form would cost the government approximately $135,000,000 annually and he will fight all moves to increase that figure.

In the event President Coolidge vetoes the bonus bill, the house is expected to pass it over the veto. The measure's fate in the senate would be problematical.

Heir to Vast Estate. Piqua, O., April 8.—Stephen Edwards of Sidney, who is in moderate circumstances, is to become heir to $5,000,000 left by an uncle, according to the family in Sidney. The uncle, Robert Edwards, died last November in Charleston, W. Va., and since then attorneys have been trying to locate the nephew, Stephen, who ran away from home when he was 10 years old. The estate is said to involve 2,000 acres of coal lands near Charleston.

Sentences Commuted. Washington, April 8.—President Coolidge commuted to one month the sentence of one year being served by Edward A. Rumely, former editor of the New York Evening Mail, and two other defendants in the case convicted under war-time laws in connection with the purchase of the newspapers. The other defendants serving with Rumely were S. Walter Kaufman and Norvin R. Lindheim, Rumely's attorneys.

MRS. JAKE HAMON TO BE CALLED

Probers to Scan All Bank Books and Records.

FRIEND OF HAMON QUESTIONED

Testifies Oklahoma Magnate Told Him He Spent $400,000 For a Republican Victory—Columbus Publisher Questioned About the Wood Campaign For the Republican Presidential Nomination.

Washington, April 8.—J. B. French of Oklahoma City, close friend of the late Jake Hamon, was questioned by the senate committee probing the naval oil land leases.

Witness testified that Hamon told him he had spent $400,000 "for a Republican victory in the election of President Harding." He said: "When Jake came back from the convention, I asked him if he was going to get in the cabinet. He told me that he was not, but said that he had spent too much money, about $400,000, for a Republican victory."

French said that Hamon told him that he had given $25,000, "so that Mr. Harding's hotel bill could be paid." He said it went to Bill Miller of Ohio, campaign manager for Harding in Oklahoma, to pay the bills of Harding's committee, "his headquarters, not his personal bills."

Wilbur W. Marsh, treasurer of the Democratic national committee, who resigned Jan. 15, said he could not remember the amounts contributed by E. L. Doheny to the party fund, but he said the records are accessible at national headquarters here. Senator Walsh announced that Mrs. Jake Hamon would be subpoenaed and ordered to bring with her all bank books and records of expenditures made by her late husband and all loans made during the 1920 campaign and six months before.

Robert F. Wolfe, Columbus publisher, told the committee that he knew nothing about the alleged offers said to have been made General Leonard Wood by oil interests before the last Republican national convention, except what he read in newspapers. Wolfe was a Wood supporter in the pre-convention campaign in 1920.

Asked about the Ohio campaign, Wolfe said: "I supported General Wood in the campaign. We elected 11 Wood delegates out of a total of 38. I went to the convention, but not as a delegate."

The Columbus publisher asserted he knew nothing of the machinery of politics. "I take no active part in the machinery of politics," he said. "I am a newspaper publisher. I depend upon my staff. I never take an active part in politics."

"Do you know anything about the offer made to Wood by the late Jake Hamon at the convention?" Senator Walsh asked. "Senator," he answered, "I know nothing about that except what I've read in the papers. I never had any idea that Wood would be nominated. I thought his case was hopeless after the senate investigation of campaign expenses. I was never in touch with the Wood headquarters."

JUSTICE ACCUSED

Donahay to Act When Evidence to Support Charge Is Received.

Columbus, April 8.—Governor Donahay advised State Senator George Bender of Cleveland that upon receipt of affidavits or other evidence in support of a complaint with respect to the alleged "dereliction" of Justice of the Peace Samuel S. Kest of Royalton township, Cuyahoga county, he will take "prompt official action" in bringing the accused official "on the carpet." The letter was in response to a communication from Bender complaining that the justice and officers of his court "have been preying upon the public, usurping authority and acting in a disreputable manner generally," and asking the governor to remove them. Advice from Cleveland some time ago were to the effect that the home of the senator's mother-in-law had been raided by card agents, presumably working out of the office of Justice Kest. Bender filed protest at the time and the complaint against Kest is a sequel to the incident, it is indicated.

Bank Merger Considered. New Carlisle, O., April 8.—Merger of the First National bank of New Carlisle and the New Carlisle State bank, with combined assets of over $200,000, is being considered by the stockholders.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Claims Ohio Delegation For Cox.

Columbus, April 8.—A statement from Cox headquarters here quotes former Governor Campbell as predicting that "convention history will repeat itself this year and Ohio again will send a solid delegation in behalf of James M. Cox." "That delegation will be voting on the last ballot as on the first, again nominating Ohio's three-time Democratic governor and under circumstances more propitious," the statement quoting Governor Campbell said.

Missing Broker Not Dead.

Cleveland, April 8.—It was disclosed here that A. S. M. Pratt, stock broker, missing from his home in Norwalk, O., is alive and well in this city. Funeral services were held Friday at Norwalk over the body of a man found in Maumee bay and identified by members of Pratt's family as that of the missing broker. Pratt said he left home following a quarrel. Both Pratt and his wife say there has been no reconciliation.

Victims Held as Witnesses.

Toledo, April 8.—Three denatured alcohol victims were removed from the hospital to the city jail. They are held as witnesses. State officials are convinced that more than one person is responsible for the illegal sale in Toledo of denatured alcohol, the drinking of which caused 19 deaths in two weeks.

Life Term For Student.

Cincinnati, April 8.—Halton P. Siddall, 26, of Equality, Ill., was sentenced to life imprisonment on a plea of guilty to second degree murder of his friend and classmate, Juan A. Mazzola, after attorneys for the defense and the state had agreed to change the charge.

Automobile Overturns.

Hamilton, O., April 8.—Thomas A. Burke, 34, world war veteran, died here after the automobile in which he was riding swerved from the Dixie highway, ran through a fence and upset. Two companions were slightly injured.

Dry Laws Enforced.

Xenia, O., April 8.—Law enforcement in Greene county was praised by State Prohibition Commissioner McDonald on a visit here. Xenia and Greene county are reasonably free from liquor violations, he said.

Bandits Rob Church.

Cleveland, April 8.—Safe robbers, who smashed a safe in the office of the Lakewood Methodist Episcopal church, made off with $450 in cash and $168 in checks, officials of the church reported to police.

Infant Burned to Death.

Toledo, April 8.—The two-year-old daughter of Harry Bowman was burned to death. The child's mother and Mrs. Ursula Britton, whom they were visiting, were burned trying to save the child.

Rent Eviction Bill Killed.

London, April 8.—The rent eviction bill, sponsored by the government, was defeated in the house of commons by a vote of 221 to 212. Premier MacDonald said the bill was an emergency measure; that eviction orders were increasing alarmingly throughout England.

Select McAdoo Delegates.

Colon, April 8.—The first regularly organized political convention in the history of the Canal Zone was held when Democrats named six delegates to the national convention of the party to be held in New York, all instructed to vote for William G. McAdoo.

CARRIES MELLON SURTAX RATES

Revenue Bill Completed by Senate Finance Committee.

CUTS MADE IN NORMAL TAXES

Levies on Telegraph and Telephone Messages and Tobacco to Remain the Same—Senate Democrats Adopt Tax Reduction Program, With Maximum Surtax Around 40 Per Cent. Features of Both Measures.

Washington, April 8.—The senate finance committee has practically completed the new revenue bill and it will be reported within a day or two.

Senate Democrats also have drafted their tax reduction program. While its details are being kept secret until the Republicans bring their bill out of committee, it is known the Democratic plan cuts the income tax off the person with an income of $10,000 or less, even more than the bill passed by the house, and that it adds a little to the 37 1/2 per cent maximum surtax adopted by the house, making it around 40 per cent as compared with 25 per cent in the Mellon plan. Under an agreement reached by the majority members, the senate finance committee's tax bill contains the following provisions:

A 3 per cent normal tax on incomes of less than $4,000; a 5 per cent normal tax on incomes of more than $4,000; a tax of 25 per cent on inheritances of more than $10,000,000; a 10 per cent tax on all jewelry costing more than $25; a flat corporation tax of 14 per cent instead of 12 1/2 per cent; a tax of 10 per cent on all admissions over 50 cents; a tax of 10 per cent on radio parts and sets and Mah Jong sets.

Taxes upon telegraph and telephone message and tobacco will remain the same, instead of being reduced as in the bill passed by the house.

The following taxes will be wiped out under the new senate bill: Beverages, candy, corporation capital stock, capital loss provisions, straight levy on theaters and circuses, knives, forks and daggers, liveries, hunting, shooting and riding garments, yachts and motorboat sails, carpets, rugs, trunks and purses.

LIVE STOCK IN ALASKA

Experiments Carried on by Federal Department of Agriculture.

Washington, April 8.—The United States department of agriculture is of the opinion that Alaska will soon be feeding herself. Experiments are being carried on, the department stated, with different breeds of cattle. Hogs are now being bred and raised successfully. Hardy dairy breeds of cows soon will be developed, giving the Alaskan population a good fresh milk supply. Hardy strains of small grains do well in the interior in most growing seasons, according to the report, and when made useless by the elements as food for human beings may be made into hay and silage. Winter feed is a big problem for Alaska farmers, but the silo is helping them solve it. Oats, with peas or vetch, make good silage, as well as some of the native grasses, especially wild rye and a tall sedge, the report stated.

Paid Rental For Tracts.

Columbus, April 8.—State Director of Agriculture Truax announced that more than 400 farmers in 49 counties of Ohio have been paid back rental by the state fish and game division as lessors to the state of wooded tracts for game preserves. D. O. Thompson, chief of the division, has made a complete record of all leases and met the state's obligations. Practically all of the leases are being paid in advance. According to figures obtained from the survey, these preserves are located in 36 townships of 55 counties, with a total acreage of 60,000.

TAKE REGISTERED MAIL

Two Bandits Hold Up Truck and Escape With $20,000.

San Francisco, April 8.—Two bandits held up a mail truck here and escaped with eight sacks of registered mail, said to contain $20,000 in cash and negotiable paper. The bandits forced the driver to take them to a section of the city where an automobile was parked at the curb. Forcing the driver and a guard to open the compartment door, the bandits selected the eight sacks, tossed them into the waiting automobile and sped away.

PROBLEM FACING OHIO

Donahay Suggests Carrying the Government to the People.

Columbus, April 8.—Governor Donahay in a statement here said: "The state of Ohio now has a population of approximately 6,000,000 persons, more than twice as many as the population of the United States at the time Washington became president. In the years to come, will all the machinery of the state government be concentrated in Columbus, or will it follow the way of the federal government and expand to densely populated centers?"

The governor cites "some progress already made" in the latter direction, with branches of the industrial department, building and loan division, banking department, prohibition office and other activities opened in various large cities. "With the population continuing to increase and state departments expanding, would there not come a time when state buildings would be maintained in principal centers to house the subdepartments? Would not this be carrying the government directly to the people, rendering the population a more personal and prompt service?" the governor asks.

Mussolini Scores In Elections.

Rome, April 8.—Premier Mussolini triumphed in Italy's national elections, his fascist leaders claiming 40 per cent of the entire vote. With the victory thus won, fascism reaches a constitutional basis and Mussolini is assured of remaining in power virtually indefinitely unless splits should eventually occur within his own party. Under the present parliamentary regime, the premier of Italy can not be overthrown by minority opposition parties, but only by his own party. Mussolini arranged this before the elections.

AMERICANS SLAIN

Two Shot Down From Ambush In the Wilds of Albania.

New York, April 8.—According to a message received here by the Albanian consulate, George B. Delong of New York and Robert Lewis Coleman of San Francisco have been killed by bandits between Tirana and Scutari, Albania. The Americans were shot down from ambush. Albanian authorities have taken every measure to apprehend the murderers, the radiogram said.

The district where the murders occurred is remote and the crime was not discovered until some hours after it had been committed. Strong detachments of police immediately were ordered to the scene and are searching the country. The consulate said it was the first time American nationals had been attacked in Albania and that the "government and people of Albania are profoundly distressed."

Force of Habit

A minister, as an illustration of extreme embarrassment, tells of a strapping big fellow who brought his demure young fiancée to the church parsonage for matrimonial purposes.

"According to my usual custom," says the minister, "I turned to the bridegroom at a certain point in the ceremony and said, 'John, this is your lawfully wedded wife.'"

"In the excitement of the occasion John turned awkwardly in the direction of his newly acquired life-mate and stammered, 'I'm pleased to meet you.'"

"I know, but this twig is bent on being a girl."

The Retort Courteous

Two high school girls were engaged in conversation on the street. Said the first:

"Tom tried to kiss me last night and I wouldn't let him."

"Did it make him angry?" her companion asked.

"I should say. He said he wished he had called on you."—Marysville Democrat-Forum.

Same Manner for Both

The wealthy uncle was talking over the prospects of his nephew with the lad's mother.

"How is he doing with his studies?"

"Oh, very well. He shows a great talent for music, and his manner is very haughty. His teacher thinks he will become a conductor."

"Ah! Indeed!" responded uncle. "Orchestra or street car?"—Stray Stories.

Appropriate Remedy

Not long ago a woman called on a physician who is noted both for his efficiency and his bluntness. This woman's baby was indisposed and this doctor ordered castor oil.

"But, doctor," protested the woman, "castor oil is such an old-fashioned remedy!"

"Babies also are old-fashioned, madam," snorted the doctor.

Crowd Has Personality but Little Individuality

It would have been more to the purpose if the critics had insisted upon Walt Whitman's position as the poet of personality, rather than of individuality. These terms are commonly confused in the minds of most people, and even held to be interchangeable. In reality a maximum of individuality implies a minimum of personality and vice versa. The individual, as such, is necessarily isolated and therefore devoid of personal ability to share in the lives and fortunes of others; the truly strong personality is he who is able most fully to share and understand the nature of those with whom he is in contact, and who correspondingly subordinates his individuality to theirs. And the same is true of crowds, as of individuals. A crowd has personality; it has little or no individuality. It is a fact that crowds in different countries reveal individual differences; thus an English crowd is less excitable, restless, noisy, than an American crowd; and a Chinese crowd may be even more reserved, for aught I know; yet, despite these accidents, each crowd expresses certain fundamental reactions, possesses certain elementary desires common to all humanity. Each crowd is at bottom a vast reservoir of blind desire, vague faith, dumb suffering; each crowd is composed of units that breathe, hope, die; each crowd is uncoordinated personality in conflict with individual differentiation; each crowd is at once Everyman and Noman.—John Gould Fletcher in the North American Review.

Proof Mark Placed on Weapons Made in Europe

Spanish and German firearms usually have, instead of the maker's name, a seal, frequently of gold, depicting characters—animals and letters—from which, if possessed of a list of such seals, one might determine the manufacture of the weapon, and hence its approximate date. English and French gunmakers, however, if marking the arm at all, did so by placing their name and that of their town on the lock-plate or barrel or on both.

The marks known as "proof marks" were stamped on, usually by a government official, after he had tried out and "proved" the arm to be all right. As a rule the method of "proving" was to load the piece with several times its normal amount of powder and shot, and then discharge the same. If it survived the test it was considered "proven" satisfactorily.

Thus, as different marks were not adopted until a certain date, one may ordinarily be assured that an arm bearing them was not manufactured before that date.—Detroit News.

ODD LAW CODE OF OLD HITTITE TRIBETranslations Disclose Many Facts About Ancients.

Philadelphia. — Translations of a code of laws by Dr. George A. Barton, professor of Semitics at the University of Pennsylvania, are disclosing many facts about the Hittites, a tribe driven out of Palestine by the Israelites.

The tablets of laws, containing about 200 sections in all, of which but 15 are missing, form part of a find made in 1906 by Prof. Hugo Wenckler in Cappadocia, Asia Minor.

The tablets, Doctor Barton said, were probably written between 1370 and 1320 B. C., during the reign of Suppilulima and his successor, Mursili. His researches, he said, prove the language of the Hittites to have common roots with Greek and Latin.

"The Hittites," said Doctor Barton, "were an agricultural people, holding lands from the king or from cities with certain feudal obligations. Banditry is provided for in the code. Provision is even made for distribution of the plunder."

"The laws deal with almost every sort of offense—assault and battery, separation of wife and husband and breaking engagements. When a man and wife decided to separate, the house was divided and the children, with the exception of one, went with the father."

"The people were great raisers of bees. The code provided that anyone guilty of stealing bees should be punished by being stung to death."

"All prices were regulated by law. The charge for bronze axes, kettles, domestic animals and even wages is specified."

Pacific Coast Swept by Dangerous Storms

Los Angeles, Cal.—A danger sign was hung out over parts of the Pacific about which little weather information has been published when Dr. Stephen S. Visher of Indiana university gave members of the American Meteorological society meeting here recently figures on the number of hurricanes sweeping those waters.

On the average two or three violent cyclones occur annually off the west coast of Mexico and Central America, he said. There are few islands between Hawaii and Mexico, and relatively few ships passed that way before the Panama canal was opened. Surprisingly little has been written about the storms in that region and now it is very desirable that the danger be known.

The central Pacific likewise is not without dangerous storms, Doctor Visher said, although few appear to attain the hurricane violence that is the case in the eastern and western parts of the ocean. About twenty-seven cyclonic disturbances have occurred in tropical latitudes between longitudes 140-W and 140-E in the last three years. Of these an average of three a year were accompanied by gales. Honolulu, which is reputed not to have severe storms, nevertheless suffered from a wind of 56 miles an hour in January of this year.

Two States Double Wealth in Ten Years

Washington.—The wealth of Michigan and Maine more than doubled in the decade from 1912 to 1922, but Maine's per capita wealth showed a larger increase than that of Michigan. Statistics for those states were issued by the census bureau.

Michigan's wealth at the close of 1922 was $11,340,150,000, an increase of 116.7 per cent over 1912. The per capita wealth was $2,883, an increase of 69.5 per cent.

Maine's wealth was $2,006,531,000, an increase of 100.1 per cent. The per capita wealth was $2,586, an increase of 4.1 per cent.

Red and Green Sandals to Give Way to Brown

Alligator, tan bark, Alredale, platinum—no, it's not an announcement from the zoo nor the opening line of a piece of vers libre, but just to let the women in on a secret—these are the newest shades in spring footwear according to the shoe salesmen, who are forecasting foot fashions for the coming season, says a writer in the Detroit News.

While the names of these colors fall startlingly upon the ear they are much easier on the eye. According to the shoe dealers, the brilliant colors of the past season, the flaming red slippers, the blue booties and the green gaiters are out and this spring the feet of the women who are a la mode will be clad in coverings of more somber hues.

The feet that will be put foremost will be hidden in shoes of suede, they declare, in varying tones of color. Alredale (the newest shade for women's shoes), a mixture of gray and tan, will lead the list; tanbark will run a close second, and platinum, a delicate mingling of various grays, will also be featured.

As for the architecture of the shoes, they will follow the present popular pattern, that of allowing as much air as possible to reach the foot by the means of delicately patterned holes cut in the leather, built somewhat on the plan of a doughnut. Sandals will be in great demand and especially a new model called the Hollywood sandal. These sandals will be of the strap variety the shoe prophets say, and will only be more popular than a more staid sister in footwear, the puritan pump, designed on the colonial lines.

Colorful Ribbon May Be Used on Business Suits

The business woman usually finds it difficult to keep her costumes attractive. But that desired appearance of fresh daintiness may be acquired through the use of colorful ribbon.

Every woman enjoys the psychology of bright colors, even though these must not be too pronounced in her daily office costume. Here is where the ribbon remnant will supply just the right line without too blatant a display of tints.

Embroidery in the Egyptian manner is popular. Or the model may be brocaded in several color tones or with the very important touch of the tinsel brocade. Nor must we fail to call attention to the plaid ribbons.

There are so many possibilities for the fashioning of these accessories. One collar and vestee set made of a Chinese blue with old raspberry undertone remnant was trimmed with the covered buttons of old raspberry. This called forth much admiration.

With the ribbon pieces of more somber background which show a tracery of embroidery in colors, a length of bright beads may be worn.

Cut Steel Is Used to Adorn Lady's Clothes

An interesting new-old note is the return of cut steel to favor in the field of costume jewelry.

We are more or less accustomed to its use in buckles of various sorts and it makes beads for our embroideries and passementeries, but along with the resurrection of cut steel ornaments for shoes and evening slippers we are being introduced to its use in earrings, which are looped, of course, bracelets, of considerable width and set with colored stones; and the smart sautoirs that depend from a ribbon of black.

The fashion of cut steel is a distinctive one, none the less welcome that it is decidedly practical.

Reward for Jesters Who Lighten Life's Burdens

England knights her playwrights and her men of wealth, and so does France, but France has gone a long step further and awarded academi palms to three clowns, the Fratellini brothers, for their beneficial effect on the public morale.

No task is harder than finding new jokes or making old ones appear funny, the New York World states. There is a continuing dearth of merriment, only occasionally relieved by obliging amateurs. When a good story comes to light the city pounces on it like a hawk; it is passed from mouth to mouth in every office and factory till it wears thin with handling. Obviously the market is undersupplied, and the art of eliciting smiles should be subsidized as well as honored.

The better comedians of the revues, who receive but a shame-faced fame, deserve at the least congressional recognitions and pensions from the public treasury. They are in line of descent from Will Kemp, Shakespeare's clown; Grimaldi, whose memoirs were edited by Charles Dickens, and all the harlequins of history.

Since there are no orders of nobility in this country, those who succeed in being particularly excruciating should receive cash prizes or gold medals easily convertible into cash. As a nation we are too serious, not as a matter of choice, but because there is so little first-rate wit to be found. And we deserve our fate. What have we ever done to encourage the successful clown except to laugh at him?

Respect for Courts

Justice in the minor courts—the only court that millions of our people know—administered without favoritism by men conspicuous for wisdom and probity, is the best assurance of respect for our institutions. The stopping of criminal procedure of needless requirements, without impairing the security of innocence, and in general the fearless destruction of provisions which only embarrass the just distribution of controversies, should not long be delayed.—Charles Evans Hughes.

AMUSEMENTS
History is experience handed down, and the experiences from the discovery of America by Columbus to the finish of the Civil war, as these great experiences have been handed down, are being put on the screen by Yale University Press under the supervision of the Councils' Committee on Publications of Yale University.
The first of these, as it properly should be, is "Columbus," and it made its initial appearance in this city yesterday at the Metropolitan theater, where it continues until tonight. Dramatic? Tremendously so! Imagine the sympathy commanded by a man who sticks for years, thru poverty and disappointment, to his daring conceptions the only man unafraid to sail to the Edge of the World—and beyond! Think of being kept waiting in the ante-chamber of a king's palace and refused audience day by day because your maps were being tested by the king's mariners. Where can you find greater suspense than in Columbus' plea to Isabella and Ferdinand—of being asked for terms—and then turned down! Just another disappointment, and trudging on again to another country to plead before another court. Then recalled on the road by Isabella and—but words never have and never will do the justice to the first historic world event that bears a relation to America, that is done by the pictured "Columbus" at the Met theater.

ROYAL ARCH
Annual Inspection of Circleville Chapter Tuesday Evening.

Circleville Chapter, Royal Arch Masons held its annual inspection Monday evening. Arthur G. Morgan, high priest, of Chillicothe, representing the grand high priest, was the inspecting officer.
Presiding the inspection a splendid chicken supper was served to 117 members by the Eastern Star ladies. A number of visiting Royal Arch Masons were present from sister lodges among them being Arthur G. Morgan, H. G. Roush, H. R. Goedert, William H. Wagenman and W. G. Coppel, of Chillicothe; Dr. R. A. Brown and R. F. Cramer, of Columbus.

The inspector in his report complimented High Priest D. V. Courtwright and his subordinate officers on the quality of the work, the degree of Mark Master being conferred on one candidate.

SOCIAL—
A surprise party was given Mrs. O. V. Bostwick of East Mound street, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. R. Ballard, of East Mill street, celebrating her 57th birthday anniversary, March 30. A delightful dinner was served and was enjoyed by those present. The color scheme of pink and white was carried out. The guest list was limited to the immediate family and a few friends. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Ballard and family, Mr. and Mrs. Olan Bostwick, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Evans, Mrs. Cora Coffland, Fred O. Bostwick and family, Miss Marguerite Gory, of London; Mr. Cary O. Evans of Columbus, and Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Ballard and son, Richard of Tarlton. A few members of the family and friends were detained because of the high water.
Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Watts announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Alice, to Mr. Burnell R. Rundels son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rundels, of 333 Gates street, Columbus. The marriage will be an event of the near future.

The Scrap Book

Odd Beliefs of Indians About Fish and Animals

Charles Hill-Tout, author of a book on British Columbian Indians, tells of a curious belief of the red men about the salmon.
"Whenever they (the salmon) begin to run," he says, "no Indian was allowed to fish or kill until the first salmon of the season had been reverently brought to the chief of the tribe, who would gather his tribesmen and bid his wife cook the fish in a new basket specially made for that purpose. Then he would distribute a small bit to every man of his tribe who was ceremonially clean, for none who were ceremonially unclean could be allowed to touch a bit of that first fish.
"After that any member of the tribe was free to kill salmon, but it was understood that they were to return the head and entrails to the water, with the belief, another writer says, that if they did this the fish would return to life, and thus the waters of the river would not become depleted."

Hill-Tout also says the Indians believe that the spirit part of fish and animals is more real than the corporeal part. They believe that the destruction of other parts of the carcass besides his flesh, which may be used for food purposes, would make the bear, for example, very angry, and that he would take his revenge on the Indians for the indignity placed upon his remains. They believe if the animals allow themselves to be killed for food, then it is the duty of those who kill them to treat with reverence what they do not use.—Detroit News.

Two Men Given Credit for Discovery of Hard Coal

There are several stories of the first attempts to make anthracite coal behave as it was then thought all coal should behave. It came to be known as "stone coal," and for a number of years was commercially unpopular.

It is related, as one of the stories of the discovery of the secret of hard coal, that the owner of Fell's tavern, in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., had some anthracite nuggets lying about. He threw some of them on a wood fire in an open grate one night and retired.

Imagine his surprise the next morning, after he had been repeatedly told by guests at his tavern that the stuff was no good, to find an extraordinarily heat-giving fire burning in the grate.

Another version has it that a blacksmith near Scranton had a pile of the "stone coal" in his yard. He was a stubborn chap and told himself one day that he would make the stuff burn. He put it in his forge, poked it, blew air through it and otherwise treated it like any well-behaved soft coal. He stuck to it without success, and finally went home in disgust.

The next morning he found it burning merrily in his forge, a decidedly satisfactory fire.
The circulation of stories against anthracite coal retarded its use for a time.—Nature Magazine.

Swings Clubs Four Days

The nonstop dancers who established a world's record in the north of England not long ago are not the only people who believe in running a good pastime to earth in a somewhat haphazard fashion. Roller-skaters, not to be outdone, recently accomplished a distance of 220 miles. The record was created by two Frenchmen, who skated without a break for twenty-four hours and seven minutes. A girl who lives at Escher claims to have knitted 58 jumpers in 88 working days, while an enthusiastic but probably tuneless pianist punished an instrument for 82 hours—and then went into a fit of delirium! This was also the fate of an Australian club-swinging, who swung a pair of three-pound six-ounce Indian clubs for 107 hours continuously. An army sergeant established the record for ball-punching by hitting a 40-ounce leather ball with elbows, wrists, knuckles and forearms for 28 hours on end.—London Tit-Bits.

It Was Tough

"It's hard," said the sentimental landlady at the dinner table, "to think that this poor little lamb should be destroyed in his youth just to satisfy our appetites."
"Yes," replied the smart boarder, struggling with his portion, "it is tough."

Art of Indolence

"You say you are a broken-down artist? You poor man, I sympathize with you and if you'll chop a little wood, I'll—"
"Sorry, lady, I'm an artist, but woodcuts ain't in me line."—Boston Transcript.

GLORIA SWANSON

"ZAZA"

AN ALLAN DWAN PRODUCTION

PRESENTED BY ADOLPH ZUKOR

A Paramount Picture

Gloria Swanson in the role she was made for! "Zaza," queen of the gay French music halls; a creature of whirlwind emotions, savage loves and hates---a veritable wildcat.

And how she plays it!

Under the spell of her artistry, the famous old French love drama flames into a new and greater glory. Her performance takes rank with that of Mrs. Leslie Carter, to whom the role brought undying fame when Belasco first presented it in America; and with that of Geraldine Farrar who created the role in opera.

But this Zaza---

Allan Dwan, who made "Robin Hood" and "Lawful Larceny," produced it---your guarantee that it's magnificently done.

Gloria Swanson in "Zaza"---you'll love it!

"COLUMBUS"

First of "Chronicles of America" to be Shown at Met Theatre.

No greater service has recently been rendered American education than the enterprise of the Yale university press in putting into moving pictures its much-admired 'Chronicles of America.' The first of these films has already been released with the most gratifying results. It discloses to popular view the first voyage of Columbus, and discloses it in a fashion that is a delight to the mature mind and must make an indelible impression upon the child. Here we can see Columbus and the chief persons in the drama---such as Don John of Portugal, Ferdinand, Isabella and the companions of his adventure---amid the scenes in which they moved and in their manners, costumes, attitudes and behavior as in reality they were. Probably human art will never excel this attempt to recreate the past. Not even the most instructed can look at this film and not learn something. A thousand pages of history, for example, could not so skillfully portray the varying attitude of Ferdinand and Isabella towards the Italian visionary---the sulky skepticism and unfriendliness of the king and the warm and pious enthusiasm of the queen. One of the chief comforts one derives from the presentation is that everything is absolutely true. The creators of this moving picture have not thought it necessary, in the passion for human interest, and 'the story,' to add details for which there is no historic record. The scenes, the costumes, the events are all accurate to the minutest detail. To know that such a great and dramatic episode---an episode as thrilling as the imagination of man ever conceived---rests upon the solid basis of fact is therefore one of the chief satisfactions that comes from the exhibition.

The usefulness of the moving picture for educational purposes has been pointed out for years. The commercialists have entirely failed to meet this need. A university can be no better employed than in using the inventions of modern civilization to promote the enlightenment of the masses; this is university extension work of a high quality. The eagerness of the commercial theaters to obtain 'features' primarily intended for school purposes shows again that a really good thing is what the public wants.---The World's Work.

STORY OF THE BABBLING WOOD

By MARGARET SWEENEY

(©, 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"THIS is the place, madam." The voluble agent had brought his rickety car to a sudden stop. "Three-acre lot, eight-room house and a good barn. No improvements; but it's worth double the asking price—one of the best-built houses in Larchdale."

The woman, the prospective buyer, was silent. From her seat in the car she scanned the little white house that was for sale. She was a slender woman—young, dark and dignified. With her mind's eye she saw crisp curtains behind the small, dingy squares of window glass, and lilacs—lilacs a-bloom on the leafless bush beside the neglected doorway; and upon the lawn, beneath a magnificent elm tree, she saw her two small sons at play.

The agent's wise old eyes, with swift appraisal, were measuring the woman. "Will she buy?" he wondered. "Probably not. Women never know just what they want—they like to poke around. This one doesn't look like 'ready money.' Her black coat looks shabby. Yet, she must have money or she wouldn't start out to look at even this old shack. A widow, no doubt. Well, anyway, she's a real lady—that's easily seen."

Having thus listed the lady, the village real estate man, gray, fifty and florid, resumed his business.

"No country house looks its best in March. In three or four weeks from now, when the trees are green, this place will look a hundred per cent better. It is worth five thousand dollars if it's worth a dollar, and all they're asking is—"

"Who did you say owns the place?" the lady inquired.

"It belongs to the Crumpler estate—Stephen Crumpler's grandfather built that house, and it is good for another hundred years. The Crumplers were lumbermen and you—you may be sure that the best lumber in the land went into the building of it."

The agent, as he spoke, had turned his car into the driveway, and the lady noticed that under the light layer of snow upon the path there was a thick tangle of withered weeds and brambles.

"The house has been a long time vacant, has it not?"

"Well, no, not so very." The agent assisted the lady to alight. "The house is in fine condition, all newly papered and—"

He had begun to fumble with a key that refused to turn in the rusty lock; the lady, while she waited, peered wistfully through the murky windows.

The rooms looked inviting. The quaint white panels and the low ceilings made a strong appeal to the heart of this home-seeking woman; so did the open fireplaces and the broad planks of the old floors, upon which lay the morning sunshine.

"It is charming," the lady told herself, "and the price—the price is astonishingly low. The house has marvelous possibilities."

And again, before her mind's eye, pictures began to form—fires were crackling upon the hearths; hand-woven rugs lay upon the broad planks; stanch chairs and tables, dark and time-polished, stood about—there were books, books everywhere, and before a crackling fire there were two small boys, listening entranced, to a lady reading stories from a Wonder Book.

"All right, madam"—the agent had succeeded in opening the door—"all right, madam," he called again. With a little start the lady turned from the window and entered the old house and, presently, as she tip-toed about, timidly opening chimney cupboards, she became strangely troubled.

An inexplicable feeling—a sickening fear—had taken possession of her. She had become dimly aware that the agent's raucous voice had fallen to a whisper.

"Why," she asked herself, "why this inward agitation—this throbbing pulse, this choking sensation, this sudden anxiety to get out—out into the sunshine? Has old wood—wood dead for more than a century—the power to—put my soul into a turmoil? Has—"

"You'll like the upstairs rooms, madam," the agent whispered, as he paused at the foot of the narrow stairway; "there's a fine view from every window, and there's—"

"No, no, thank you. The house is—is not just what I am looking for."

The ancient door stood ajar and the lady, with a feeling of relief—a sense of having escaped something, she knew not what—hastily left the house.

The short ride back to the station was begun and ended in silence; the agent disappointed—his morning wasted; the lady perplexed, her mind groping for a cause—a reason for the fear that had clutched her the moment that she had entered the old house.

And the memory of it—the tumult of mind that she had experienced—was still with her, an unsolved mystery, as she journeyed homeward.

"Nothin' doin'," the agent announced to his wife, who attended the office in his absence. "Nothin' doin'! That lady just took one look around and beat it back to the city. They all—"

"Did she know," his wife broke in. "Had she heard about the—the—"

"She heard nothing—she just saw the ad in the paper and liked the price. It's the old house itself that babbles."

Oils and Their Uses.
Crushing seeds to extract oils has been employed in Japan for centuries. Rape seed oil has long been used for frying fish and lobsters, and is today the principal fat in the Japanese diet. Cottonseed oil was used as a substitute for rapeseed oil and for lighting purposes. The ancient Japanese also understood the extraction of oil.

Corn Borer Control Is Shown on Screen

Ravages of European Pest Is Visualized in Picture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The job of protecting America's greatest crop from the ravages of the European corn borer is visualized in a new United States Department of Agriculture educational motion picture, "Corn Borer Control in the Corn Belt."

The corn borer was first discovered in the United States in Massachusetts in 1917, but was also present in Ontario, Canada, at that time. It spread southwestwardly from Ontario, and is now attacking the eastern limits of the great corn belt in Ohio and Michigan. The picture tells how the federal and state bureaus of entomology are tackling the job of controlling the "borer" co-operatively, and tells the corn belt farmer what he must do to prevent its spread to new territory and to keep it under control in infested areas.

Burning of stalks, cobs and bobbins in the field, the plowing under of the stalks left standing over winter, cleaning up the barnyard and pigpen, employing the silo and shredder and other recommended methods of control are shown. Operation of quarantines to prevent corn on the cob being shipped out of the infested areas is also pictured.

"Corn Borer Control in the Corn Belt" will be circulated through the educational film service of the department and the co-operating state institutions. Copies may be borrowed for short periods, or may be purchased at the laboratory charge.

Calves Are Produced on Close Margin of Profit

Beef calves are produced on a close margin of profit. The only source of income from the beef cow is her calf. The value of the calf at weaning time must cover the cost of keeping the cow for a year, depreciation, hire, service, interest on investment, rent, and losses, and leave a margin for the owner. This is true whether one is producing calves to sell at weaning time, or to sell as two-year-old feeders. If one cannot produce calves as cheaply as he can buy them at weaning time, it will pay him to buy rather than breed. By cutting out the breeding herd altogether, this would put all available capital and available land into handling steers. Usually it is better to raise calves where conditions are favorable for taking care of them when dropped.

Lambs Fed Soy Bean Hay Make Economical Gains

Lambs fed soy bean hay made slightly faster and more economical gains than those fed clover hay, and self-fed lambs consumed more grain but made more profit than hand-fed lambs. Such are the principal results obtained by Purdue university in the lamb feeding experiments recently completed, when 200 head averaging 88.5 pounds were sold at $13.75.

F. G. King of the Purdue station, who conducted the test, states that soy beans and soy bean meal were comparable in feeding value to cottonseed meal. Lambs fed soy bean hay returned a profit of 12 cents a head whereas the clover fed lambs lost 42 cents each. The lambs were western and were fed in eight different lots for 80 days. They gained a little under a third of a pound a day.

Feeding Silage to Ewes

The important points to emphasize in silage feeding with the ewe flock, are to provide a legume hay in addition thereto, to furnish an abundance of common salt at free will, to supply as much grain as is consistent with the ends desired, and to incorporate in the ration under heavy production conditions some highly concentrated acceptable protein supplement. This supplement may be linseed meal, cottonseed meal, or others, or else see to it that green grass is one of the components among the feeds.

Farm Facts

- A well-equipped desk is a labor-saver in the farm home.
- Nothing will add more to the appearance of farm buildings than a coat of paint.
- When soils and crops and live stock are well cared for, they generally care well for the owner.
- In planning winter and spring work reserve a few days for rounding up the machinery scattered about the farm.
- While the value of farm products is largely influenced by quality, this is a factor which has been individually and collectively neglected by many farmers.
- A cheap form of swine insurance is the provision of dry sleeping quarters for the brood sows. These quarters should be well-ventilated, but free from injurious drafts.
- Try it and see how young pigs respond to a feeding of clover or alfalfa leaves in winter. It is because the leaves furnish vitamins which the summer-fed hogs obtain from green grass or clover.

Great and good art must unite the two; it cannot exist for a moment but in their unity; it consists of the two as essentially as water consists of oxygen and hydrogen, or marble of lime and carbonic acid.—Ruskin.

GOOD HAY CROP

Farmers and Dairymen Find It Good When Clover Fails.

"How about soys?" This question, put by mail to 300 Ohioans by the Agronomy department of the Ohio Experiment station, brought answers which are summarized by Earl Jones, extension specialist at the Ohio State university, as follows:

"Soybean hay is good hay; 69 per cent of the men said it was better than clover hay; 23 per cent call it just as good. Soy hay was particularly popular with dairymen.

"Early varieties, harvested early, are best; 60 per cent of the farmers said they cut when pods were forming 34 per cent cut later, but added that cutting too long delayed means coarse woody hay.

"Three-quarters of the 300 farmers preferred drilling in the beans solid, about 5 pecks to the acre, above planting in rows.

"On weed control, the farmers generally agreed that early plowing helps and that the ground should be gone over with a harrow or weeder before the beans come up and again after the plants are from 3 to 4 inches thru the ground.

"Nine-tenths of the men who have been growing soys reported that they will continue. The 10 per cent who reported themselves dropping the crop were in the main, small seed growers."

Early this week the farm crops department issued a special statement pointing out northeastern Ohio, the state's great dairy region, has three-fourths of its hay and in timothy and suggesting soys as a good emergency hay crop where clover is lacking.

GHOSTLY PRANKS IN HOUSE ROUT BRIDE

Bed Covers Pulled Off Pair by Unseen Visitor.

Marion, Kan.—It may be a ghost that is pulling the covers off sleepers here these cold nights, and the people of Marion are very much astir about it.

Perhaps little attention would be paid to the reports that are so current as to what is taking place were it not for the fact that they come from a family of such high standing in the community as the Mehl family, who are early settlers in the county and who have accumulated fortunes until their land holdings include many acres of immense value.

Out on the lone Kansas prairies, four miles east of here, stands an old stone house built 40 years ago by Jeff Terry, an early settler. At that time the fine two-story structure was the pride of the community, but today it is perhaps the most talked of house in that part of the state.

It is said that the builder of this house, who lived there a number of years, accumulated a great deal of wealth. He was close in his dealings, and before his death left the county on account of heavy taxation. It is also rumored that a tragedy occurred near the home in an early day, the murderer never being apprehended. Through a very peculiar circumstance, the farm was sold and it is said that Terry realized but very little from the sale.

Bride Flees to Mother.

A few years ago the farm came into possession of the Mehl family. A year ago Jay Mehl, one of the younger boys of the Mehl family, was married to a prominent young woman of the county and this stone house became their home. They have lived there ever since, Mehl does now, but his bride has fled to the home of her mother—at least when it comes time to sleep.

All went well until a few months ago when strange sounds arose from the basement. This worried the Mehls and they took particular pains to see that all doors and windows were securely fastened before retiring. The strange sounds, although faint, as if footsteps in the basement, caused the young couple many sleepless nights. "We will cement the basement floor," young Mehl told his wife. This was done and it only made matters worse. "We will move our bed to the second floor," said Mrs. Mehl. This was done and arrangements made to lock the door from the inside so that there was no possible chance of anyone entering. Yet, night after night, "the invisible something" would appear to climb the stairs and enter their room and pace the floor.

Struck on Head With Fist.

The climax came recently. After Mr. and Mrs. Mehl had retired late the ghostly footsteps seemed to ascend the stairs and approach the bedroom. Mehl said he was struck on the head with a fist.

Mehl arose and flashed on the light, expecting to confront some great giant of unusual strength, but nothing more than four walls and a familiar ceiling were revealed. Nothing could be found. He again retired. When comparative composure was gained, the solace of sleep again was sought, but almost immediately the covers were pulled from the bed. Both Mehl and his wife are positive on this point. Mehl again arose and turned on the light and replaced the covers. This violence was repeated at frequent intervals throughout the night, and there was no sleep in the household.

Frightened, but resolved to stay, Mrs. Mehl's family was called in to stay the next night. This stopped the quilt-pulling pranks, but all heard sounds resembling footsteps.

Mr. Mehl says he does not believe in spirits nor ghosts, and cannot account for the strange visitations.

Some of the best minds of Marion are filled with speculation such as surrounds any first-class haunted house.

Woman, 70, Cuts Timber, Also Rides Horseback

Newcastle, Wyo.—Cutting her own wood on her ranch north of this city, Mrs. Lillian Portwood, seventy years old, is a familiar figure in Newcastle as she hauls the timber a distance of 30 miles into town for sale among local residents.

Mrs. Portwood is very active and frequently makes the 60 miles from her ranch to Newcastle and return on horseback in a single day. She performs all the work on the ranch.

Mrs. Portwood came to Wyoming 30 years ago from Havana, Ill.

She claims the distinction of having shaken hands with Abraham Lincoln when he was campaigning in Illinois for the presidency.

Pastor Gives Away Cakes Each Sunday at Services

Henryetta, Okla.—Rev. A. N. Avery, of the First Methodist church, is delivering a series of sermons in which souvenir cakes are presented to the most prominent individuals under certain classification. The first of the series was the "Oldest and Youngest Mother," and the second, "Fathers and Husbands," in which R. A. Burns was given a frosted cake for being the oldest father present, his age being seventy-five. J. K. Davidson, for being the father of the largest number of children, 15 in all, also received a cake. Little Ernest Harr, twenty-four, was presented with a like token as the youngest father in the congregation.

WON NUMERALS

Miss Elizabeth Bell is on Championship Basketball Team.

Miss Elizabeth Bell, of Circleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bell, won her class numerals as a member of the Championship class basketball team at Wooster college. Miss Bell is a sophomore and was captain of her team which easily won the interclass series. Her work at forward was a feature of the season's play and won for her a place on the Varsity team which was picked at the end of the interclass schedule. Miss Bell is a popular and active member of the class of 1926.

Girls' basketball at Wooster college is played under the strict girls' rules. It forms a part of the efficient program of required physical education under the capable leadership of Miss Kathleen Lowrie. Other forms of sport taught are tennis, hockey, hiking, volleyball, modified track and swimming. This is in addition to the required class work in calisthenics and corrective work and posture.

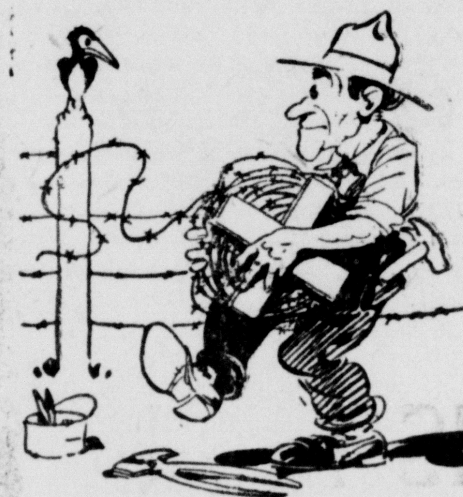

Every girl in Wooster college is taught to swim. Miss Lowrie is qualified to teach Red Cross Life Saving and much of the work taught includes this instruction.
